University Press of the Pacific, United States, 2004. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 216 x 136 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This book gives all the information needed to understand the chemical, biochemical and sanitary principles underlying the preparation of fishery products. The sequences of operations and processing conditions are described in detail together with the technological equipment concerned. Standard yields are adduced, and the principles and methods of technological calculations explained. The authors defined the standards set for the quality of finished products, and describe the methods adopted for testing and quality control. The present volume is intended as a textbook for students of higher technological colleges of the food and fishery industries, but may also be used as a handbook by the engineering and technological staffs of fishery undertakings.
