Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Poems that startle, amuse, provoke and confuse, Notes from a Commodore - Volume I is a thought-provoking collection of poetry that will make you laugh and cry and is guaranteed not to put you to sleep. Don't let the title fool you, Notes from a Commodore - Volume I contains poems for all ages and all sensibilities. Half Moon This evening, I saw a pale gibbous moon With just the faintest hint of something more It was much like the way you've been lately Except, eventually, the moon became full Monday Morning Flapping spirits unfurled by drafts of stout and ale as weary days fold into wearier nights of stale breath and failed dreams, dashed and scattered . . . The Son of a Bitch . . . There goes the opening bell The horses run like hell The jockey spits He's a son of a bitch But the horse is under his spell . . . A Damned Fool My wife called me A damned fool I asked her the difference Between a fool and A damned fool She said she was damned If she knew Dismantling the Wagers of War . . . Except for my disgusting shell and desiccated brain The house was completely empty I removed each one of my toes Lined them up carefully in the silverware drawer . . . Reviews Funny, unsurprisingly earthly, unexpectedly elegant, Mr. Lester teases the sensualist, mocks the classicist and plays atheist to the spiritualist. Notes from a Commodore - Volume I is a dreamy and in turn dog eat dog universe, no rose garden for sissies, but an excellent salt water tonic (think Coleridge) for...
