TRAGEDY IN MOUSE UTOPIA: AN ECOLOGICAL COMMENTARY ON HUMAN UTOPIA

Trafford Publishing, Canada, 2006. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 213 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.In 1968 John B. Calhoun, American behavioral ecologist, introduced eight mice into a technologically designed walled enclosure that fulfilled all the wants and needs of mice except migration in and out. Over a 41/2 year period the population exploded into a colony of 2200 mice, and then slowly and inexorably declined to extinction. Deprived of motherly love early in life, and denied access to social roles later in life, young mice grew up without knowing how to behave as mice. This book examines whether a similar fate could be in store for Human Utopia. Part I compares the suicidal effects of runaway growth in Mouse Utopia to a similar sequence of events in Human Utopia. Part II describes our dependence on the Biosphere. Part III shows how the runaway growth of technology and population is creating havoc in our species and the Biosphere. How an inner life-force symbolized as the Sorcerer causes populations to self-destruct by satisfying internal desires beyond their useful times. As the Sorcerer s apprentices, we have been preparing the ground for a crisis of crises beyond human control. Part IV describes how the Sorcerer works and how to control his destructive traits. Political, spiritual and behavioral opportunities are identified that could be overlooked, misinterpreted or ignored in steering a course toward coevolution of humanity and the Biosphere. Victor J. Crapnell: Interesting, yes; and scary! Johnny Biosphere: This book is remedial reading fom some ecologists, most employees of enviornmental protection agencies, and most forward looking businessmen and politicians. Economist Tom Muir interviews ecologist J.R. Vallentyne on Tragedy in Mouse Utopia: The Sorcerer Lurks Within 2006. Trafford Publishing, 2333 Government St. Victoria BC, V8T 4P4, Canada....
